Vast areas afire in Alaska woods

Vast areas of dried-out brush and woods in Alaska were afire Tuesday — enough to cover a square 25 miles on each side — while forest fires in the lower 48 states were being brought under control

Rain improved the chances of firefighters trying to put out major blazes in Maine, New Jersey, and North Carolina. Progress was also reported against a fire near Los Angeles.

By far the biggest problem was in Alaska, where some 420,000 acres were reported aftre in 66 separate blazes — the start of a bad fire season that was expected because winter snowfall was low.

Most fires were caused by lightning in the "arctic desert" of the Seward Peninsula. Joette Storm of the state's Bureau of Land Management said normal precipitation there is "hardly measurable," and this year Alaska has been so dry that some parts of the Yukon River have been low enough to walk across. Even humidity Vegetation on the peninsula, she said, "is dry to start out with. When lightning strikes, it just takes off . . . They really need a break in the weather . . . The fires would burn cooler if the humidity would come up." Some 1,200 firefighters were being shifted to areas where smoke was not severe enough to prevent flying. Ms. Storm, said fire fighters in helicopters were trying to dump water from the air, but in some areas there wasn't enough ground water to do it.

The largest fire covered 150,000 acres. Near Granite Mountain, six more fires covered a total of 70,000 acres. Ms. Storm said 23 fires were contained by Tuesday, but 29 were still out of con-

Meanwhile, in the New Jersey Pine Barrens, about a half-inch of rain reduced the ferocity of four forest fires. Nevertheless, officials warned that other blazes could flare up later this week. Four volunteer firemen died fighting one of the blazes last week, and authorities were continuing a search for arsonists.

4.500 acres of pine, oak and cedar were still and posing, a threat of a wider fire.

smoking in Bass River, Weymouth, Barnegat Township and Wharton State Forest. The Wharton fire, in a remote cedar swamp, had been burning for 11 days.

In Millinocket, Maine, near Mt. Katahdin, officials said a 3,500-acre fire was "in pretty good shape" after a half-inch of rain overnight. The improved conditions allowed fire crews, who had already finished fire breaks, to shift to mop-up operations.

'Now it's a matter of digging out those hot spots and wetting them down," said a forestry spokesman, Marshall Wiebe.

About 40 miles north of Los Angeles, firemen also completed fire breaks around California's biggest fire of the year and began slowly beating the flames down from the air. The fire had burned 3,800 acres of drought-dried brush and timber in the Angeles National Forest.

At this point, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman said, "we don't expect it to jump the line now, unless the weather conditions flare up . . . We should have full control later today.

Another fire in the same forest burned 140 acres but was contained.

At Moyock, N.C., three miles south of Virginia, cool temperatures and light rain lowered ground temperatures near a blaze in Currituck and Camden counties that had burned 650 acres of scrub pine.

Lightning was blamed for starting it Thursday.

Some 70 workers from Weverhaueser Co., which owns most of the land, and the North Carolina Forest Service continued trying to clear highly inflammable debris and peat. The fire was contained Sunday, but workers still reported heavy black smoke from burning peat. Wind shifts, however, were keeping the smoke away from Virginia, where it had spread the day

In Cheboygan, Mich., more than 200 firefighters and volunteers were mustered Tuesday to fight a blaze that had burned over 100 acres by Monday night, most of it huckleberry land. High State officials said fires that blackened a total winds there were reported drying up forest land whose eldest son and husband are helping bolster Rhodesia's security against armed black nationalist guerrillas, has been told her mixedrace family must leave its home in a suburb reserved for whites.

The Adamses live in Salisbury's Prospect area, which is limited to white residents under Rhodesian law that segregates suburbs between whites, blacks, Asians and coloreds - persons of Mr. and Mrs. Adams and their four children are among 22,000 coloreds in white-ruled Rhodesia. Last week, the municipal council of this capital city invoked the law and ordered the Adams family evicted.

When you are suddenly told you must get out of your house like this you start wondering why they are risking their lives," Mrs. Adams said in an interview at her comfortably furnished home.

She spoke of her husband, who works for a company building security fences in guerrillainfested areas, and of her son Trevor, 23. Like most healthy, nonblack Rhodesian men, he must do his mandatory hitch in the security forces each year. Blacks are accepted as volunteers.

Many colored citizens believe themselves trapped between the white government which grants them only slightly better conditions than the blacks in return for military service; and the blacks, who the coloreds fear might take reprisals, come black majority rule.

Mrs. Adams said she learned of the council's decision to evict her family when she read the newspaper the following day.

"No one told me anything," she said. "It was tion "not only a denial of human dignity but . . terrible picking up the paper and reading this. totally unrealistic.

We bought the house two years ago. If they throw me out now, where do I go?

The Adamses are only one of several colored. families in Prospect - exact numbers are not known — but observers say theirs appears to be a test case of the segregation law.

It was not clear why the city council ordered the eviction at a time when Rhodesia's white minority government is seeking to diminish racism as a prelude to a negotiated settlement allowing black rule.

Rhodesia — with 272,000 whites and 6.2 million blacks - has been ruled by whites since it became a self-governing colony in 1923. It broke all ties with Britain in 1965 to permit its whites to remain in power.

But under pressure from marauding black guerrillas and international opinion, Prime Minister Ian Smith has agreed to seek a formula with moderate nationalist leaders to turn the country over to black rule

Smith's decision met opposition from conservative white Rhodesians who want to keep their privileges, split his Rhodesian Front party and forced him to call elections Aug. 31 to strengthen his legislative backing for settlement

It was not known whether right-wing elements of the city council were responsible for the decision to evict the Adams family, but some moderate Rhodesians decried the action.

The National Unifying Force, a multiracial white-led political movement supporting speedy black rule, issued a statement branding the evic-

It was learned that during the talks the United States promised "in principle" to sell Seoul F16 jet fighters. The purchase would need congressional approval and the jets would not be ready for delivery until the early 1980s when the pullout should be nearly complete.

Summing up two days of consultations, the senior official said the South Koreans understand the problems involved in the withdrawal and are now ready to turn to and start working on these

COLOguilty of many deaths Washington (AP) - U.S. officials said Tuesday the leaders of

number of persons who have perished from disease and malnutrition Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, conceded to a House subcommittee that no reliable estimates exist on how many persons have been slain or died of other causes since the Khmer Rouge seized power in 1975. But he added: "For every person executed, several people have died of malnutrition and disease that were avoidable if the government had not followed a policy of applying purely draconian

Among these policies, Holbrooke said, was the Cambodian leaders' refusal to accept medicines from abroad that could have forestalled outbreaks of malaria and other illnesses.

The question of how many have died in Cambodia has fueled controversy among U.S. observers and triggered some heated exchanges when the House subcommittee chaired by Rep. Don Fraser, D-Minn., opened hearings into human rights issues in Southeast Asia in May.

At that time, estimates of the number of persons systematically eliminated as former or potential enemies of the Communist regime ranged from four thousand to as many as a

Both Holbrooke and Twining emphasized Tuesday that despite a continuing effort to keep track of events inside the virtually sealed-off nation, there was no way to be sure of how many actually have died.

While reports from individual refugees offer some valuable information about what has happened in certain areas. Twining said it was impossible to make an over-all estimate.

Twining said he has interviewed thousands of refugees fleeing from Cambodia as part of the effort to piece together events inside Cambodia. Most have come from western Cambodia. adjoining Thailand, and very few from the central areas or the eastern frontier abutting Vietnam.

Nevertheless, he said, the refugee accounts remain the principal source of information about Cambodia, and only sparse material comes from the official Cambodian radio, foreign diplomats or other customary sources.

Columnist says Soviets scheme against Sadat

Paris - The logical conclusion to be deduced from Moscow's new African policy is a Krelin decision to try and crush or overthrow the Egyptian government of President Anwar El-Sadat. During the past 18 months or so the following events have contributed to this idea:

(1) - The Soviet Union has jeopardized its previously powerful position in Somalia, mortal enemy of Ethiopia, in order to send military aid to the latter. Indeed, it added insult to injury by naming as its envoy to Addis Ababa the officer who had previously headed the Russian military mission to the Somalis. He was therefore in a position to deliver every single secret to their opponents.

(2) - The Soviet Union has steadily built up its position in Libva, both politically and militarily. A far larger stockpile of Soviet weapons is there than Co.. Qaddafi's small forces could use. (3) - Since Moscow's influence was affirmed, Libya tried unseccessfully to invade Sudan (in 1976); extensive Russian arms shipments were flown from Libya across Sudan to Ethiopia; and , more recently, in a brief war between Egypt and Libya, whose origins are unclear, reports were disseminated that uniformed Hussian technicians were killed or wounded when Egyptian planes attacked Libvan radar stations.

Originally Moscow's strategy seemed to seek control of Sudan, Somalia and Libya with the idea that Somalian bases could insure Soviet ascendancy in the Indian Ocean while Libya and Sudan between them could squeeze

But President Nimeiry of Sudan extruded the Russians. After having done so, he discovered that Soviet radar controllers had left a deliverate gap in the Sudanese system so that secret shipments could be flown from Libya across Sudan to Ethiopia.

Gen. Siad Barre, president of Somalia, objected to this double game under which Moscow was reinforcing Ethiopia while supervising bases in Somalia. He began gently to outst the Russians at a rate calculated to avoid a crisis while regaining total military control of his country.

According to Sudanese Foreign Minister Mansour Khalid, with whom I just had a long conversation: "The Russians are masters of miscalculation." Things had been going well for them in Somalis and in the Indian Ocean area. Then they upset the former, weakening their military position. The defeat of Mrs. Gandhi in India and her replacement by a more genuinely neutral government undercut their

Last year, after Lt. Col. Mengistu acceded to the unchallenged leadership of Ethiopia's governing committee and then consolidated his power, Moscow decided to bet heavily on him as a genuine "revolutionary.

The Russians apparently were willing to jeopardize their hold in Somalia, which detests Ethiopia, because the latter is larger, more populous, is the permanent seat of the Organization of African Unity and (through the province of Eritrea) controls part of the Red Khalid claims that it is not at all sure that

Mengistu is a Marxist and anyway he isn't really strong. The day Addis Ababa loses control of either Harar, to the east of the capital, or Asmara, principal city of Eritrea province, the army will oust the regime. Secondly, although Ethiopia is much larger than Somalia in area and population, the whole country is in varying stages of insurrection. As a consequence, there is a distant probability dependence, thus voiding any Ethlopian pretension to an influence in Red Sea affairs. Finally, Khalid says the OAU has carefully avoided any important meetings in Addis Ababa since Mengistu seized full powers.

Sudanese diplomacy is trying to develop a new tendency in the Red Sea area by creating what Khalid calls a "poor man's club" of the only four Arab nations listed among the 25 poorest lands in the world: Somalia, Sudan, orth Yemen and South Yemen. They are holding a foreign ministers conference next month in Khartoum.

The idea is to neutralize the Red Sea and extend nonalignment as it was originally conceived - meaning to remove it from the influence of power blocs and get it out of the arms and nuclear races. One aspect of the concept is to make it easier for the Somalis to extricate themselves from their earlier close ties with Moscow.

Come what may, however, whether in the horn of Africa or elsewhere on that vast continent, Khalid believes the Soviet Union has played an increasingly dangerous game and with decreasing chances of success, a game that it is fated to lose.

Palace worked against Margaret, says author

Margaret was a precocious teen-ager whose romance with war hero Capt. Peter Townsend was wrecked by intrigue at Buckingham Palace, a new biography of the princess

It states that Prince Philip, who was to marry Queen Elizabeth II, then Princess Elizabeth, was behind the intrigue because of his personal dislike for Townsend and concern for the royal family.

The book by Austrian-born Willi Frischauer says Margaret, the younger sister of the queen, was unhappy at Philip's intervention and felt she had won a victory over the royal circle when she then close and wed another comtremer, photographer Anthony Armstrong-fones.

The marriage did not work out. Margaret and Armstrong-, Jones separated last year and Margaret may divorce and remarry "sooner than many people think," Frischauer writes in "Margaret — Princess Without a Cause

In 1947, after a lengthy wait, Philip married Elizabeth, who became queen in 1952 when her father died of lung cancer.

Soon after, Townsend won a divorce from his wife. Margaret and Townsend hoped to marry. Frischauer wrote, but the death of the king robbed the lovers of their strongest supporter and the romance was doomed.

Frischauer said the royal circle sow in Townsend a feartal resurrection of the trauma of 1936, when Margaret's uncle abdicated for love of American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson before he could be crowned Edward VIII. # Stuart family gift a welcome complication

The magnificent gift of property given the University of Nebraska Foundation by Lincoln's Stuart family serves as a great boost to the foundation's fiveyear, $25 million fund drive. The Stuarts' generosity will benefit the entire Lincoln community and the state.

The timing of the gift - understandably offered during this early part of the foundation fundraising effort nevertheless complicates Lincoln's search for a performing arts center.

It may turn out to be a salutary com-

Monday night the City Council, although informed of the Stuart gift of approximately 50% of the highrise building at 13th and P bearing the family's name, and aware of the gift's ramifications, scheduled a bond issue vote for this November on a proposed Civic Center at 10th and P which would include a 2,500 seat performing arts

That proposal should still be regarded as viable by Lincolnites. It is a good proposal, and we welcome the news that Civic Center backers will continue to make plans to sell voters on the feasibility and need of the proposition.

They will do that pending some sort of determination possibly in mid-September about whether it would be feasible to restore the Stuart Theatre to an appropriate performing arts facility for the community. The old Stuart theater, a grand facility before its remodeling some five or six years ago, seated 1,850 for symphony concerts and stage productions. Its stage is regarded as small and the seating upon restoration would be almost 900 less than the proposed new Civic Center performing arts center. But it could be more than adequate — a theater in a setting which would now be hard to duplicate. It should be remembered, however, that restoration of the Stuart, now property of the University of Nebraska Foundation. would also cost money.

If the Stuart is deemed feasible, the bond issue may be called off. Either way. Lincoln's performing arts future looks brighter today.

When Coors was hard to get

Forgive us for paraphrasing: "Here at last, here at last . . .

No commercial product in our memory was as eagerly awaited in Nebraska as Coors beer. That's the beer the wily old Gage County sheriff always knew you had in your car trunk on the trip back from Marysville when you were 18 and in Nebraska you had to be 21 to possess it. The beer you brought back for your friends after a visit to Denver or Boulder, even if you drank Bud or Falstaff all the way out and back. The secret of Coors' success so far as Nebraskans were concerned, young ones, that is, was that you had to leave home to get it. Its inaccessibility was just as important as its light taste and the Rocky Mountain spring water reputation.

You may not care for his politics and you may not even care for his beer, but you have to admit that Adolph Coors has a good thing going. He can't make his beer fast enough to satisfy the market.

As all things popular ultimately do, Coors reached Nebraska: it stepped in from right next door decades late, well after generations of famous beer drinkers who used to savor it when it was hard to get had grown old and paunchy, and comfortable with what they could get at the closest package store.

Now that it's finally here, what? It'll sell like crazy, that's what, because there are more beer drinkers than there used to be.

But, well, we're jaded now: Coors remains a sentimental favorite - a can now and then will do nicely - but the bloom is off the rose.

There's a Portland beer, "Blitz." Wonder when the Blitz people will come to Nebraska to interview for distributorships?

Another lid on licenses?

When the Lincoln City Council lifted its ceiling on the number of Class A onsale beer licenses, struck a blow for common sense

At least that category of license did not come under an arbitrary lid which artificially drives up license values, hinders competition and can drive the unlucky non-license holders out of business.

The council, in recommending on license applications, should scrap the whole quota system.

But Councilman Joe Hampton would reimpose the Class A license ceiling. "I think we ought to establish a number and be done with it," Hampton told the council the other night. It is hoped there is little support for that regression. Moreover, it is singularly inappropriate that liquor licensee Hampton. who owns East Hills Supper Club, would, as a councilman, suggest a limit on restaurant beer licenses.

Hampton also continues to vote on liquor license matters (although in the most recent case he voted to approve a new application) while Councilman Leo Scherer, also a liquor licensee, rightly declares an interest conflict and refuses to vote on liquor questions.

There is little question that Scherer looks good by comparison.

The national media did not find this fit to print, however. Why? It would not be politic reporters, though no TV cameras, were on of me to suggest an answer.

From the closet

Chicago - My phone just rang and a man identified himself as being from Kroch's & Brentano's, the bookstore. He asked me when I intended to pay the $4.29 that was overdue on my account.

I said: "Huh?" He said: "Your account is $4.29 overdue."

He sounded very businesslike. I said: "I'm $4.29 overdue?"

"Yes, you are," he said.
"Uh, gee, how long have I been overdue?"

"Since June 20," he said.
"If that is true," I said, "I will pay it immediately." "Fine," he said, and hung up. I checked. He was right. I hadn't paid the $4.29. I wasn't trying to beat Kroch's out of it. Honest, it was an oversight. The fact is, I usually pay my bills on time. I have to be prompt because of the terrible consequences. When I hear from a bill collector or get an angry letter from a computer. I get the shakes. My mouth gets dry, my heart pounds and I begin panting like a thirsty basset hound.

I have a morbid fear of bill collections. This stems from a traumatic childhood experience. Almost everybody who grew up in the old neighborhood has it.

For a few days each month, everybody in the neighborhood would turn out all their lights when the sun went down. And they would all sit around their flats or houses in pitch darkness.

'Why is it dark?'' a kid would ask.

"It is good for your eyes," the old man would explain. That wasn't the reason. We were ducking bill collectors. Until the next paycheck came, nobody answered the phone or a knock at the door. All the cars were parked six blocks away so they wouldn't be repossessed.

You couldn't scare any of the kids in my neighborhood by saying the boogie man would get us. But we were all terrified of Friendly Bob Adams, the loan agency man.

To this day, the fear lingers. People don't hear from bill collectors very often. Instead, we have the computerizedletter that begins: Dear Customer: WARNING - YOUR ACCOUNT IS ...

OVERDUE. IF YOU WISH TO REMAIN : . . . I once got that kind of letter from a credit card com-- pany. (I hate credit cards. But if you don't have one, and try. to pay cash, nobody trusts you.) That evening, I turned out the lights, locked the doors and wouldn't respond to any knocks. I wouldn't even answer when my kids yelled: "It's us, Dad, unlock the door." Bill collectors can disguise their voices. The kids slept under the porch that night.

As a result of this deep-seated fear, I have developed my own way of shopping.

Unlike most consumers, I don't necessarily look for the most sturdy product, the lowest price, or the brand that Ralph Nader says won't turn me into a tumorous mouse. I deal only with companies that send out gentle, kindly letters. If I forget to pay a bill on time, I want to hear from a nice computer that says: "Hi, Cherished Customer: We hate to bother you, and we're sure it is only an oversight, or the Postal Service's fault, but we thought we'd drop you a little reminder that you are a teensy bit late in your account. If your remittance is already in the mail, feel free to spit in our face, hear?"

So that is it with me and Kroch's & Brentano's. Even before my $4.29 gets there, they will have a letter telling them to scratch me off their credit card list.

It's not that I think they shouldn't have called. They were absolutely right in doing so. If I owe them $4.29, and I'm three weeks late in paying, I don't blame them for getting nervous and phoning me at work. For all they know, I might have skipped out to Costa Rica.

They are in business. And as Franklin Pierce Adams once said: "Christmas is over and Business is Business." (I know he said that because I looked it up in my Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, which I bought at Kroch's for $15).

But from now on, it is cash on the barrelhead at some other bookstore.

It has to be this way. I might forget again. And the next time, it could be for $4.99. For that amount, they might have somebody call me up and yell, and I'd probably choke on my

The Soviets will not be satisfied until they control the whole world. One nation after another has been taken over by them, and we may be next. Hall of the world is sick and dying for lack of food and water, and the other half are sick and dying because of eating and drinking too much There's a happy medium between starvation and glut long. The unusual weather - drought, floods, earthquakes, tornadoes, you name it - could be a warning. Let's quit calling ourselves Christians or start loving our neighbors as we love ourselves.

Washington - Last Feb 2, wearing a cardigan sweater to show he was just folks. President Carter told the nation in a fireside chat that "inflation has hit us hardest not in the luxuries but in the essentials - food, energy, health and housing. You see it everytime you go

Just so But how has the Carter administration developed its policy from that perception? Hardly at all, save for the program of direct controls on health care costs that has been announced by Joseph A Califano, the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare

The administration's broader antiinflation policy is based on a vague, soft, sweetheart reliance on business voluntarism and public spiritedness. And its economic stimulation policy to the extent that there is one - is all but frozen in fear of more inflation and more spending that might endanger Carter's pledge to balance the federal budget by 1981 The net effect is a continuing high rate of inflation, and an official unemployment rate hovering around 7 per cent and not expected to decline to 5 per cent in Carter's first

Tom Wicker

A forthcoming economic study by the Washington-based Exploratory Project for Economic Alternatives will show how acute Carter's fireside chat observation was - and how wide of the mark his subsequent economic policies have

-Food, energy, housing and health costs absorb about 70 per cent of the family budgets - more at the lower income levels - of about 80 per cent of all American families, and these "Big Four" necessities show some of the highest rates of inflation, as well as the long-term potential for persistently rising prices

-Price inflation for these four necessities is persistent and intractable because of problems other than rising labor costs - world weather conditions, for example, price fixing by the OPEC nations, high interest rates on home loans, rampant waste and mefficiency in health-care institutions; such inflation obviously won't yield to traditional remedies like high unemployment, money supply adjustments, or a balanced federal

new attack on inflation

budget -Policies to put people back to work or in many cases, to work for the first time - could therefore be followed without much danger of inflation, if effective anti-inflation programs were aimed at holding down the prices of the Big Four necessities

Just for one fairly obvious example, when the Federal Reserve puts up interest rates, one of the most severe effects is that interest costs of home mortgages go up, which drives up the aggregate price of housing - already one of the most inflated of the American family's necessities Secondarily, jobs in the construction industry are lost that, in turn tends to increase the federal budget deficit, owing to lost income tax revenues and increased unemployment benefits Yet labor costs having actually declined from 17 to 15 per cent of new housing construction costs, have little far the bigger factors in housing inflasupposed anti-inflation policy of rising interest rates. It would make more sense to decrease bank reserve requirements for housing loans, while increasing reserve requirements for other loans, thus making it attractive for banks to channel proportionately more capital into housing construction. Similarly targeted approaches to holding down the cost of the Big Four necessities could effectively deal with the major inflationary forces

That oversimplifies, of course, since holding down prices in the Big Four area would require sophisticated programs, as well as hard distinctions between, say, public housing and more vacation homes, or between home heating fuels and fuel for jet airliners

But the possibilities opened by this approach to controlling inflation and reducing unemployment are impressive. They include a new political coalition, based on the fact that not just the poor and unemployed but 80 per cent of American families would be vitally affected and that organized to do with the high cost of housing By labor could, for once, give wholehearted support to an antition are land and capital costs - the inflation program not designed to latter actually increased by the Fed's throw people out of work or put a lid on wages

In the past 20 years this tendency to tell all problems to the court has become pronounced in politics. It seems to have begun with the race issue For the best part of a century most politicians simply declined to try solving the race problem, and for good political reason

They feared that any constitutional destroy their careers. By the end of World War II, this reasoning had become dubious, but by that time the political habit of ignoring the race problem had become pure political

The Supreme Court's desegregation decision of 1954 opened a new way out for the politicians. If the courts could be forced to make the more troublesome political decisions, the least in this world, and even profit from denouncing those court decisions which particularly annoyed the electorate Everyone could have a grand time abusing Earl Warren for coming to grips with national problems so urgent that the politicians were afraid to deal with them

Since 1954 American politics increasingly shifted to the courts, with the tacit consent of the politicians, as the various "rights movements" that altered society looked less and less to Congress for their success and fought for their goals through the court

Politicians profess unhappiness with this but their lamentations are not to be taken too seriously. The activity of the courts, after all, gives the politician solution to which they subscribed might - not only the chance to escape blame for mescapable social changes that enrage the people of a conservative land, but also the opportunity for some politically profitable abuse of the courts as meddlers in political business

This hardly makes for a healthy political system, for it encourages politicians not to deal with problems politicians ought to be dealing with The courts become their place of first resort as they have with the sexually politicians could escape retribution, at harassed women of Yale. ## budget includes handicapped funds Schools

By Joe Hudson Star Staff Writer

Money for 12-month education for severely handicapped youngsters was included Tuesday night as the 1977-78 Lincoln school budget won final approval

But members of the Lincoln Board of Education, in approving the $45.7 million budget indicated they did not necessarily support year-round schooling for the severely han-

The board nevertheless included $15,850 to finance summer school for the severly handicapped for an additional month. A decision will come later whether to actually extend the summer session an additional four weeks

At a budget hearing earlier this month, some parents and officials asked that such an extension be made - one of only a few adjustments that taxpayers asked be made in the budget

The board also received a legal opinion on school was made available without increasing the budget, Prasch noted, by shifting of funds within the budget.

The budget, unanimously and routinely approved by the board Tuesday night with Pearl Goldenstein absent, is up by more than 8% over this year's budget. But the school mill levy is expected to drop by more than one mill, to 55 351 mills plus an additional .196 mills for the Educational Service Unit 18 budget.

Increases in property valuation and state aid are expected to offset the budget increase. At that mill levy, the owner of a house appraised at $40,000 would pay $778.26 in school taxes next year, down by more than $30 from this year.

The budget pays for five hours and 15 minutes of school for an estimated 27,539 students over 178 school days. That schooling comes at a cost of $1.78 an hour for each student, $1 11 of which pays instructional salaries,

The final mill levy figure could change depending on property appraisals and the fate of a current petition drive to overturn $20 million in additional state aid to schools. In other action, the board adopted a new policy regarding the disclosure of individual schools' standardized test results.

Principals will be authorized to provide information about their school's results to all parents of students at that school, upon

There had been fear that results would be misinterpreted, and that certain schools would be saddled with inferior reputations.

The board also discussed, but delayed, action on a proposed revision of guidelines on disclosure of student records.

The revision, made to bring the district into compliance with the federal privacy act, was worded unclearly, contended board member Milan Wall.

May 4th coalition vows to retake site

"Kent, Ohio (AP) - Leaders of the May 4th Coalition vowed Tuesday night to reoccupy a construction site at Kent State University after school trustees decided to proceed with plans to build a gym annex near where four students were shot to death in 1970.

Meanwhile, some members of the group, which opposes construction of the $6 million building, reportedly were arrested by sheriff's deputies for violating a court order by going onto the site last Friday.

William Whitaker, coalition attorney, said warrants charging contempt of court had been issued against 27 persons and that three arrests had been made.

A spokesman in the sheriff's office declined immediate comment on the

About 150 protesters walked onto the site briefly Friday while a hearing was in progress in Portage County Common Pleas Court on whether the university should be allowed to build the project near the shooting scene. Judge Joseph Kainrad subsequently allowed the school to start construction there.

Whitaker said he will appeal the decision to the 11th Ohio District Court of Appeal in Ravenna on Wednesday,

After university trustees decided Tuesday to proceed with construction plans without any further delays, coalition members went into a meeting to discuss possible reoccupation of the site on Thursday.

Until then, coalition leaders said, guards probably will be posted or another encampment may be set up outside the roped-off site so that any attempts to begin construction can be

"We're headed on a collision course," Greg Rambo, a coalition spokesman, said after the trustees' meeting.

"We've tried every means available to us and this just goes to prove the system doesn't work. We have only one course of action. We will reclaim our land.'

The trustees specified no time for the start of construction.

George Janik, board chairman, said cost and the "serious impact on the educational mission" of the school were the reasons trustees decided not to delay construction of the $6 million annex any

A motion by board member Joyce Quirk to delay construction for 10 days while possible sources of funds to cover the cost of changing the site of the project were explored was rejected. Portage County Common Pleas Court Judge Joseph Kainrad ruled Monday that the university could start construction on the gym and barred protesters from occupying the contruction site.

As construction jobbers began to implant the 4-by-4 posts across the treefringed hill, Charles Trinemeyer squatted outside the roped-off area from which protesters had been led or dragged by campus police July 12, when 193 persons were arrested for defying a court order to vacate the hill.

The 29-year-old Trinemeyer, a former Kent State student who lost his right leg in Vietnam, sat on the grass with his crutches beside him and holding his hands around a candle as he maintained his vigil.

"I remember Vietnam very clearly," the former Marine said. "I don't want to remember, but forgetting is worse. What they're trying to do here is forget. Burying the site is burying the memory of what happened on May 4.3

On May 4, 1970, Ohio National Guardmen killed four students and wounded nine others in a confrontation with anti-war demonstrators.

University officials have said the school doesn't have the money to redesign the blueprints or seek new bids to move the annex to another site.

It was also announced this week that the U.S. Interior Department will make a study to possibly designate the area around Blanket Hill as a national historical landmark. If the site were so named, the use of federal funds for the project would be limited. A decision, however, was not expected until next Swiss authorities recovered all but some $400,000 of the $2 million ransom and said the rest was presumably spent for high living and luxury cars.

Spanish police said six foreigners, including a woman, were seized over the weekend in Marbella and Madrid. French police, however, said eight persons were arrested in Spain and one in The discrepancy in numbers was not immediately clarified, but authorities agreed the kidnapers included eight Argentines and one Italian and that the woman seized in Spain and the man arrested in Paris played only secondary roles. However, official sources in Paris said the eight Argentine members of the kidnap squad were former members of the Peronist movement, and that the leader and at least one other of the abductors drew heavy jail terms for an attack on a hospital van in Buenos Aires.

This might help explain the language of communiques that French newspapers began receiving after the 58year-old Revelli-Beaumont was kidnaped. The communiques claimed the abduction was carried out by the selfstyled Committee for Socialist Revolutionary Unity and demanded $30 million rensom. Fiat refused to meet it.

Waiver would provide city with building project funds

Chances are good that Lincoln will receive a waiver of federal regulations, allowing the city to receive about $650,000 for a construction project, the City council was told Tuesday.

Reid Charles, assistant to Mayor Helen Boosalis, said Nebraska congressmen and officials of the Economic Development Association say the waiver is likely.

The waiver would allow the city to receive the "Pockets of Poverty" funding even though the city has no census tracts in which unemployment is above 8.5% annually. The two lowest census tracts have an annual unemployment rate of 5.4%. Their rough boundaries are R St., A St., 9th St. and 17th St. for one tract and Q St., K St. between 17th and Any project for which an application is submitted must be located in those areas. Mayor Boosalis said city officials have been able to compile a list of three projects.

The list includes the restoration of old City Hall, on O St. between 9th and 10th, renovation of the old Cengas Building at 233 10th, which is being considered as a possible police station. and repaying in the areas.

Mrs. Boosalis asked the council to set priorities among the three projects, but the council was unable to agree on a ranking Tuesday night.

Last year when similar special funds were doled out, the city used the money to build an addition to the Bennett Martin Public Library. That project is currently underway.

Suspect and detective exchange shots in bar

Omaha (UPI) - An Omaha detective and a burglary suspect exchanged gunfire Tuesday night in a local bar and two persons were held hostage after the suspect escaped the bar and crashed into the back door of a bouse, detective Robert Brisby said.

Brisby said he approached Gary Kennedy, 25, of Omaha who told him, "Don't come any closer, Brisby, or I'll kill VOU.

"I told him 'Don't be stupid, Gary, you're in enough trouble already. But he repeated his threat and shot twice at me. I dove behind the bar (about 15 feet away)." Brisby said. Kennedy shot at the detective eight times with a nine-shot

22 caliber revolver and Brisby fired three times, possibly wounding Kennedy, the detective said. Brisby was uninjured in the shooting "I fired as he ran down the hallway. And one hostage said he was bleeding." Brishy said.

The suspect escaped the bar and "crashed" through the back door of a local home and held two persons hostage. Brishy said. But a woman was able to get to a telephone and placed a 911 emergency call to police, he said, at which time

Kennedy fled. Kennedy eventually was picked up on an Omaha street and was in transit Tuesday night to police headquarters.

San Francisco — Summery days. In our condominiums at Sinking Inn. we have an old swimming hole.

It was built by one of the best builders of pools. It is lighted from beneath — for night swimmers. It is filtered and pure. And if you get tired of swimming, you can go in the clubhouse and get steamed in a sauna.

It's a fine new world for today's moppets. I did my swimming in the Carmel River across the hills from Monterey where I was supposed to be in school.

The old swimming hole did not have a filter. But we got just as wet as the kids today.

Placid news in the summer, San Francisco is still waiting for Anita Bryant to charge in on her charger. Anita defeated the homosexual set of Dade County, Florida.

San Francisco, she said, was next. So we've been looking around for some ideas for her.

In Yemen, a condemned homosexual was executed before 6,000 people. In this antique land, the offense is serious. Not like stealing hubcaps.

Islamic law says the crime must be punished by throwing the offender "from the highest point in the city." However, this town is all one-story — the best they could do would only have broken a leg.

ਮੈ ਮੈ ਮੈ

There was a suggestion to take him up in an airplane and toss him out. But - "too expensive," said the town clders

They decided to behead the fellow. The official executioner failed to show up.

Finally, the religious judge asked: "Will you consent to be shot?"

The condemned man said

OK. So they shot him.

Yemen is considered a backward country. But you've got to give them marks for being persistent.

In order to get to the old swimming hole, we had to drive to Carmel.

In crisper salad days, I drove the Carmel hill in a Model-T. Getting up to full speed in the siight dip at the bottom. Coaxing the panting beast up the slope.

The goal was to make it in high — which we never did. But there were landmarks we noted to see just how far we made it. The car trembled and bucked while we worked spark and gas levers cleverly to get the most out of it.

All cars were tested on the Carmel hill. It was the grand proving ground of the area. A car that went over in high—well, that was a car!

Math workbooks shift emphasis

By Nancy Hicks Star Staff Writer

Many Lincoln elementary children will be bringing new math books home this September.

Though parents may notice that the "Mathematics Around Us" books are colorful, the pages unmarred by pencil drawings and messages, they will probably not recognize any major differences in the math program itself.

That's because there are few noticeable differences, according to Ron Massie, math consultant for the Lincoln Public Schools.

There is more emphasis on developing computation skills. measuring and learning basic geometry, plus a great deal of emphasis on the metric system.

The metric system is used whenever computation of math is required, Massie said.

There is less emphasis on terms of new math like "commutative." "associative," "sets." "But we haven't thrown out the modern math,'

Advocates of new math wanted to make mathematics more meaningful struction; most instructions and to 20 major math programs and by spending less time on drill and more explanations are written. Brandt narrowed the selection down to about time on understanding the terms and properties of math, explained Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction.

Unfortunately, that position was misunderstood by some teachers, who thought that drill was out, he said. Now much of the modern math terminology is being saved for college bound students, he said. The the Lincoln system is not returning to the era of pure arithmatic drill. 'That would be a mistake,' said both Brandt and Massie. And the introduction of the Scott, Foresman and Co. textbook series will not end the use of the Continuous Progress Laboratories (CPL), common in some Lincoln elementary schools. CPL is a method of individualized math instruction where students do not move on to a new topic until they master the current topic, explained Brandt. This method requires the student to tary school curricula. use self direction and be willing to work on his own. There is little verbal in-explained. The Scott, Foresman math series is divided into 36 levels - with six for each grade level.

By the end of second grade most students will know how to add and subtract single digit numbers. By fourth grade most youngsters should have mastered multiplication and be moving on to long division and fractions. In the upper grades, more sophisticated material - decimals, common fractions, solving story problems, probability and statistics will be introduced. Textbooks wear out and publishers change material making some books obsolete, so buying new textbooks is a common school occurrence. Any change in textbooks for Lincoln schools is preceded by several years of study. Brandt explained. The Lincoln system has a defined, seven-year cycle for evaluation and study of all elemen-

Beginning almost two years ago a math advisory committee screened 18 tribute this fall, the math textbook

10, said Massie.

These books were displayed during the spring of 1976 and teacher comments were solicited.

The teacher rankings and the consensus of a seven-person committee both favored the Scott, Foresman series, he

The treatment of races and sexes in the books were also studied and the reaction was "basically very positive," said Brandt.

Publishers tend to be a little gun shy on these two issues, said Brandt. Committee members pointed out that the illustrations used cats and flowers more than people.

Teacher preparation for the new series started this summer with eight hours of training for building liaison teachers plus filming of seven videotapes to be used as teacher training tools.

The liaison teachers are expected to train teachers in their own buildings. With the $80,000 to $90,000 in textbooks and workbooks ready to disquestion is settled for a few years.

Wake up, America. Your paycheck has increased. Did you notice?

The increase is due to the Carter administration's tax cut which added about $2.10 a week to the average worker's paycheck,

Spread over the nation's 100 million job holders, that comes to lots of cash finding its way into the economy, although on an individual basis it won't have the same impact.

Colorado vacation fondly remembered

By Frances Amen

In the summer of 1956 our Bible class foursome decided to spend ten days of vacation in Colorado. We wanted to rent a cabin in some quiet mountain retreat where we could relax and spend some hours in Bible

We decided to write for some brochures of cabins which advertised in newspapers. After carefully scrutinizing the assortment which we received, we considered a place called Silver Plume which is located at the foot of the Continental Divide and Loveland Pass and fortyfive miles west of Denver.

We had never heard of it, but it was described as one of the most picturesque and interesting places in the Colorado Rockies - plus the advantage of true relaxation without the hub-bub of a resort center. It was once a famous boomtown because of its silver mines. So, site unseen, we wrote for a ten-day cabin reservation and enclosed a down payment. Our reserbut the fourth member of our group (a teacher) who owned a new Rambler and would be the driver on our trip lived in Friend, during the summer. We were to meet in Friend on Friday evening. Obligingly, the parents of one of our group provided transportation.

At 4 a.m. on Saturday morning we four left for Silver Plume. The traveling responsibilities of the trip, outside of ine ariver, were aividea among the remaining three. One had charge of checking the road map for the driver and another had charge of the gasoline kitty into which we all contributed equal amounts. The other person had charge of the grocery kitty since we prepare our meals in the cabin. With all due thanks to Providence, the trip was without incident and we arrived safely in Silver Plume at 7 p.m. Saturday evening. In the dark we checked in at the keeper's office and were directed to our cabin which looked mighty comfortable to

Sunday morning dawned clear and beautiful and we walked down to the clear running stream to view the majestic beauty around us and meditate in the clean mountain

Rustic as it was, the cabin was equipped with a kitchenette and dishes and cooking utensils. We prepared breakfast and thereafter each had her turn at preparing the meals

We had a small old-fashioned ice chest and we kept it replenished for our provisions One of us assumed responsibility of remembering to empty the water pan under the ice chest each night before we retired (a duty which I remembered from my youth).

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a up at the door with little Johnfriend who calls me every evening and tells me her troubles. One hour is a short conversation with her. Only it's no conversation because she does all the talking.

I have plenty of troubles of my own. My husband spends the whole weekend in front of the TV drinking beer and smoking one cigarette after another. We have three teenage boys.

They're all on drugs and can't get along with each other or their father. Our daughter is 22, out of work, divorced, and she has three kids which I take care of while she runs wild. I am ready to put my head in a gas oven but I never tell my troubles to anyone.

This friend with all the problems says she is seeing a psychologist and he tells her it's good for her to talk about her problems. Well, it may be good for HER, but it's bad for ME. What should I do? PROBLEMS OF MY OWN

DEAR PROBLEMS: Tell her that you wrote to Dear Abby, and SHE said it's bad for YOU to listen to somebody's problems every evening for an hour. And if that doesn't help, cut her short in self-defense.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a college-educated couple who, instead of hiring a sitter for their 3-year-old son. take him wherever they are invited? I don't mean on casual bridge evenings, but to a late dinner party to which six other couples had been invited. We don't have extra bedrooms as vet, and Mr. and Mrs. S. show ny all ready for bed. (Our bed!) They didn't ask us if we minded, nor did they make any excuses for bringing him.

Naturally, the child fusses a little, being in a strange bed and all, and his parents take turns running in and humoring him, which disrupts the entire party. These people can afford a sitter just like the rest of us, but they have taken the child with them ever since he was a month old. Any comments?

PARTY SPOILED

DEAR SPOILED: If this couple spoiled ONE of your parties, shame on them. If they spoiled TWO, shame on Your complaints are valid, but if you want action. I suggest you address your complaints to the offending couple. DEAR ABBY: There's nothing wrong with keeping your Christmas tree up all year. It's a good conversation piece, and it helps to keep the dog in the house HARRY E.

Of the total, just 1.2 million pounds were candy bars that sold for a nickel, compared with 16.7 million pounds in 1971:

The report said although sugar prices have been moving downward for the past two years, "cocoa prices soared skyward" and canceled the effects of lower-cost sugar. Other production factors also have increased.

Illinois has assumed the title of American's candy kitchen by producing 27.7% of the nation's supply. Pennsylvania is second with 20.6% and the report said it soon may overtake Illinois.

The industry, which employs 56,700 persons, apparently has determined that it has its foot in the door for selling more candy and is trying to boost consumption back to its high point in 1968.

The industry is in the midst of a promotional campaign centered on a slogan that may increase business in dentist offices and produce frowns on the faces of mothers trying to protect their children's teeth. It reads: 'Candy is delicious food - Enjoy some every day."

Opening lead - three of diamonds.

Deception plays an important role in the play of the cards. Declarer should try to get not only the tricks he is entitled to make on the merits of the hand, but also any others he can obtain by means of deceptive tactics. The defenders should similarly do everything in their power to undermine declarer's efforts to score all the tricks he is entitled to.

This psychological battle often produces strange repercussions. Sometimes one side triumphs, sometimes the other. This deal shows how a defender managed to fool declarer by using scare tactics.

East won the diamond lead with the king and cashed the ace. He then played the six of clubs, hoping to plant the thought in South's mind that the six was a singleton.

Declarer won the club in dummy with the ten and played a trump to the ace. But now he was afraid to play a club to the jack for fear that East might ruff it. Instead he played the king of trumps, hoping to find a 3-2 trump division. West showed out and South went down one.

Now let's suppose East had made the more natural lead of a spade at trick three. In that case, declarer's plays would have been virtually automatic. He would win the spade with the ace, cash the ace of trumps, take a club finesse and lead a

After East followed low, South would make the safety play of the eight to assure losing only one trump trick. This method of play would have made the contract.

It is true that South could have made four hearts by reading East's club return correctly. But the fact is that declarer's reaction to the club return was perfectly normal. and it is difficult to blame South for being taken in by East's

Tabs won't buy dialysis time

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689,

Good intentions lost

At the place where I work, someone started to save beer and pop can tabs to help buy time on a kidney dialysis machine for a patient. I thought the hospital with the machine was in Lincoln so I called to find out where I could deliver the many tabs we had saved. They didn't now anything about it. I would hate to throw out all the tabs we have saved - what can we do?

ACTION LINE: According to a spokesman for the National Kidney Foundation, unfounded rumors about saving items for diaylsis time "rises every spring like the Phoenix. The national and Nebraska Foundation headquarters each year puts out releases explaining that no such donation program exists, but nonetheless, thousands of tabs and what-not are saved by good-intentioned folks like yourself. One channel for your collection efforts might be to save recyclable items such as newspapers and aluminum for cash. The money collected by your organization could then be turned over to a charity for research work.

Where'd they go?

I have an appliance I took to Miller & Paine - there was a repair shop on the fifth floor. When I got there they told me the shop had moved but were hesitant to tell me where these folks are now.

J.B., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The folks at Miller & Paine were glad to help The appliance repair shop on their fifth floor has relocated to 432 So. 11th.

Grin and beer it

We hear there is a Krueger beer made in Cranston, R.I. and would like to find out if the firm has any mugs or posters available.

-Diane Kruger, Firth

ACTION LINE: Sorry, Diane, the folks at Naragansett Brewing had no Krueger beer items on tap. A spokesman explained that few promotional materials have been made in the past few years. However, they will check around with some area distributors to see if they could find you something for your wall. We'll keep you posted.

Envelopes are costly

ACTION LINE TIP: A few months ago we warned readers about sending money for at-home work schemes such as "addressing envelopes in your spare time." Generally the performance record of many of these plans is poor: they are profitable only to the promoter. Before sending cash for any get-rich-quick plans, check with your Better Business Bureau

Sochi model resort

Sochi, U.S.S.R. (AP) - At the turn of the century, Russian nobles basked in the sunshine and drank from the mineral springs at this forested Black Sea resort. Today, the 90-mile strip of coastline 850 miles south of Moscow has been turned into a model of what the Kremlin likes to call a "socialist resort. By this they mean that palatial rest homes and sanatoria, beaches and wooded hills are provided to ordinary people at low cost, along with free medical care for those who need it. Officials of Sochi say they are putting into effect a 1919 decree of Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin, who said all resorts with palaces and estates were to be used as health

Sochi is the largest of the country's resorts, which together received 48 million vacationers last year in their holiday homes.

Each year, 3 million of these vacationers visit Sochi -- more than the city of 280,000 can really handle. The "socialist resort" is highly organized, with trade unions assigning vacationers to spots in Sochi's 180 rest homes and 53 sanatoria, according to figures provided by deputy mayor Yevgeny O. Lyashenko. People who fail to obtain a place through the trade union stay where they can, packing into hotels, communal quarters and rooms in private There are some fine resort hotels along the water's edge, but the best of these are reserved primarily for foreigners, who pay higher prices, and in coveted hard currency.

One Russian woman said she succeeded in booking a room at the five-year-old Zhemichuzhina Hotel only by bribing a clerk with imported coffee and American cigarettes, and that she was told she was causing the hotel to lose money.

The Zhemchuzhina charges Soviet citizens about 3.90 rubles (close to $5) for a single room, while foreigners pay 20 rubles (about $27).

Ten-year-old girl still sucks her thumb

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a 10-year-old daughter who still sucks her thumb, much to her own and our embarrassment. How can we help correct this problem?-H.L.O.

It is time to begin looking for possible psychological reasons for this continuing habit. Usually peer pressures in school are sufficient motivation to end it. But it need not bode any serious problems for the future. I had a friend whose youngster did this until she started school. She then became a 'home" thumbsucker for another year or two before she finally gave up this form of self-gratification. The episode did prompt some special parental attention to the youngster's emotional needs. In that sense continued thumbsucking can be a blessing

I had a letter recently from a married woman of 21 who told me she still sucks her thumb and wakes up in the morning with it stock in her mouth. She seemed to be an otherwise well-

You say it embarrasses your daughter. I suspect this will soon bring her out of it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What does the word "depression" really mean? I mean when a psychiatrist uses it?-H.P. It can be a general term. The University of Pennsylvania's recent "Physician's Handbook on Depression" offers as good a general definition as any I've read: To the lay person, it may mean simply feeling blue, down, under the weather, or unhappy; to the physician depression denotes a broad group of mood disorders with many subtypes.

"The central characteristic of these depressive disorders is a marked loss of interest in usually pleasurable outlets, such as food, sex, work, friends, hobbies, and entertainment. This inability to derive pleasure from life is pervasive."

It's important to realize that depression doesn't always occur without physical reasons. Many illnesses can contribute to

Health Tip

The effects of cigarette smoking on the respiratory system are widely known. However, what about its effect on the circulation system?

The nicotine found in cigarette smoke stimulates that part of the nervous system that controls the heart, blood vessels and other internal organs that function almost automatically, says the Nebraska Medical Association.

For years, smoking has been known to be related to Buerger's disease, a constriction of the small arteries in the hands and feet that can lead to gangrene and necessitate am-

Among other effects of smoking are those of an apparent tobacco allergy in some sensitive persons and aggravation of peptic ulcers. Patients with these conditions are generally advised not to smoke. While all tobacco smoking affects health and life, cigarette smoking appears to have a much greater effect than cigar or pipe smoking. Among the possible explanations are that cigar and pipe smokers often do not inhale, and the temperature at which the tobacco burns is

Lincoln Journal and Star, Wednesday, July 27, 1877

The horses head for home Tuesday but before that happens, track identifyer R.W. Shaal has to check tatto marks.

Miss Mido win highlights Lincoln opener

Participating in ribbon-cutting ceremonies were (from left to right) Lancaster County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, Lincoln to run out the whole race. She went out on the first turn and Mayor Helen Boosalis, County Commissioner Bob Colin and Gov. J. then real bad on the second James Exon.

By Mark Gordon

Miss Mido may not have performed at her best in her first State Fairgrounds start, but she certainly had few doubters after Tuesday's opening-day Inaugural Handicap.

"This was her first time on a bullring (less than a mile track), noted rider Bruce Brown after he guided the filly to a 11/2-length win in the $5,000 Inaugural.

"I think she'll get much better her next time out. She probably did more damage to herself than to the other horse (Lanyons Lick)," Brown said.

As expected, it was strictly a two-horse race between Miss Mido and Lanyons Lick.

The two exchanged the lead for much of the 6-furlongs chase that lured seven 3-yearold fillies. Finally, Miss Mido prevailed at the wire, although Lanyons Lick's rider, Wayne Anderson, claimed foul.

"She (Miss Mido) was trying

Brown agreed Miss Mido drifted some, yet didn't think it influenced the outcome. The stewards obviously agreed as they ruled in Brown's favor.

"Sure, she drifted out, but she never impeded the other horse. I was on the inside the whole way," he said. "It's much easier on horses to go from a bullring to a mile track than the other way. She proved that at Ak-Sar-Ben.

"She's a real nice filly," Brown said.

Trainer A.D. Turner of Omaha, who owns Miss Mido with John Clair of Omaha. termed Miss Mido "probably as good a filly as there is Clair said he purchased Miss Mido from John Cheeney Jr. on June 3 during the Ak-Sar-Ben meeting in Omaha. He refused to disclose the price.

"She's paid for herself, however," he noted. "We don't know how good a filly she is, really.

As the 2-5 favorite, Miss Mido earned $3,000 and paid $2.80, $2.20 and $2.20. Lanyons Lick, the second-favorite, outside of Ak-Sar-Ben.

Aunt Priscilla wins $13.40

I was so happy and excited seeing my darlings run Tuesday at the State Fairgrounds that I raced to the winners' circle after my two sweeties won.

I tried to give a great big kiss to that darling little Ken Jones who rode Torch's Mountain and Likely Laughing, but my better judgment prevailed and I just said thank you. I did manage to hug that adorable Wayne Anderson for giving me those two fast ponies. The $12.60 win on Torch's Mountain and the $4.80 on Likely Laughing added $13.40 profit to my $116 spree fund so I now have $129.40. On Wednesday, I asked cute Bill Stallings for two fast ponies. He told me to bet my $2 win tickets on Fifth Bird in the fifth race (isn't that nice?) and King Hussar in the seventh.

'Other considerations,' money buy Nets a home

siderations granted to the New York Knicks have made it possible for the New York Nets to move from their current home in Uniondale, N.Y., and become the fourth professional team to move in part or completely from New York to New Jersev.

Knicks President Michael Burke said Tuesday he was and we stay in the Garden, but worked out between the Knicks with the real world. Given the and Nets which will allow the former American Basketball Association club to move to New Jersey.

Brownfield at home on golf course or Jim Brownfield looks more like a farmer-rancher than a golfer. Actually he's all of those Brownfield, a Cozad native, put aside his farmingranching chores this week to come to the Capital City to enter the Nebraska Men's State Amateur Golf Championships which open this morning at the Hillcrest Country Club.

After a practice round Tuesday, Brownfield put a wad of Skoal between his cheek and gum, opened a can of cold beer and talked about the problems of keeping the family operation going and at the same time maintaining a competitive edge as one of the state's top golfers. The rugged redhead, with drooping mustache, is 27 years old. With a stocky build (6-0, 205 pounds), standing there in faded, tatered jeans, Brownfield doesn't look like the golfer to be feared during the four-day, 72-hole medal test.

The jeans are a trademark with Brownfield. No fancy.

multicolored polyester golf slacks for him. He may not look the part, but along with the Skoal and the cold can of beer, his golf bag will have 14 clubs he knows how to use.

Regular winner

Brownfield has won four of the last five tournaments he's entered. Last August he captured the prestigious Midwest Classic in Hastings. In his final '76 appearance at the Norfolk Labor Day tourney he didn't fare as well, but this summer he's managed just three outings - the Tournament of Champions in Grand Island, plus smaller weekend tournaments in Holdrege and Cozad. Brownfield won them all.

mits. The reason? He and his father farm 700 acres of irrigated corn, have another 50 acres in hay plus a section and a half (860 acres) in grass on which they graze 300 head of cattle. In the winter they fatten the cattle for market in their own feed lot.

There just isn't any choice," Brownfield says realistically. "When you've got work to do on the farm it's got to be done. The gold comes second.

Jim's dad got him started swinging a golf club at the age of nine. "We had sand greens on our Cozad course until the mid 50s." he says, "then about 1965 they fixed it up so we have watered fairways. The farmers in the area built the greens and put in the irrigation system. It was all volunteer help -areal community effort. Now we've got a great little course."

Brownfield toured the nine-hole layout in 29 once to tie the record set a few years earlier by Dan Bahensky, who would also be a tourney threat this year if the recent NU law graduate weren't taking his bar exams.

Who will challenge?

Brownfield, who played his collegiate golf at Oklahoma State, graduating in 1972, was a teammate of Mark Hayes, who is among the top money winners on the pro tour.

Our senior year we were third in the NCAA." Jim recalls. "That was the year Texas had both Ben Crenshaw and

Love of baseball brings McManaman bus rides, beer

By Ken Hambieton

Staff Sports Writer Steve McManaman likes baseball quite

He has to in order to leave a good paying job with a secure future to play professional baseball. Not the pro baseball that brings in million-dollar contracts for a .280 batting average, or a 5-6 record and a 4.50 earned run average, but the baseball that's almost never heard about. McManaman, a two-time all-Big Eight designated hitter at Nebraska, signed with the Minnesota Twins after being drafted in the 13th round and was immediately assigned to their Class A farm club, in Wisconsin Rapids, Wisc. "I've been here 45 days and have played in about 45 games," said McManaman, a 6-4, 220-pound, 21-yearold. The difference between playing here and in Lincoln (at NU and with the Beatrice Bruins semi-pro team) is you're completely on your own.

"Nobody is going to give you a lot of encouragement and nobody is going to tell you how to live your life." McManaman said. "You play with the hopes of a team win, but everybody is playing with the thought of being the one out of 25 that makes it to the major leagues from the minors.

McManaman, who is the starting rightfielder for Wisconsin Rapids, is currently batting .260 after a slow start. "I'd like to hit my way into the majors but I'm not expecting anything to happen too fast," he said.

"The pitchers throw a lot harder there than in college ball, and you don't see any slow curves," said McManaman, who has six home runs and nine doubles in 120 at bats. There are a lot more hard sliders and fast balls that drop off the table when they reach the plate," he said "but I've accomodated for that by moving back in the batter's box.

One of the many problems McManaman, along with other minor leaguers, face is the lack of top-notch equipment.

"I ordered six bats when I signed, but I haven't gotten them yet." he said. "So I'm using other guys' bats and we've run out of good ones. So we're using storebought bats and without the balance and consistent weights it presents a problem. 'Our field is owned by the city and playing the outfield can be a challenge because all our games are played at night and our lighting system isn't too great, he said. The $6.50 per day expense money doesn't go too far, but there isn't a whole lot to do anyway, McManaman said.

A typical trip is the seven-hour bus ride to Waterloo, la., playing a double header and another seven-hour bus tide home in one day.

"I found a good place to live — a farmhouse outside of town -- where I live with four other players," he said. When I first got here I was living with five guys in a mobile home and that didn't last too long, before I needed to get out and find a place with a bed.

'When we're playing at home, you play horseshoes, watch TV or go to the beach before the game.

"My wife is going to be bringing my car up from Lincoln so that may help find something to do." McManaman said, referring to his wife Gwen, a nurse

"I've played baseball all my life, through Little Chiefs. Southeast and Nebraska," he said. "I just hope this may blossom into my playing a while

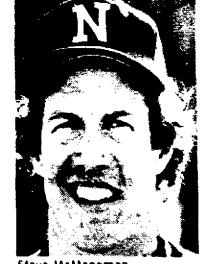

"Unlike a lot of other guys on the team I have a college education I can fall back on," McManaman said, "But I'd like to get going in baseball first.

McManaman may play instructional baseball in Florida when the Midwest League season ends, Sept. 15.

"If I can do well here and in winter haseball and have a good spring. I'm told getting to the AAA league isn't too hard. he said.

McManaman is enjoying one of the benefits of playing for a winning, leagueleading team . . . a case of beer after each game won.

"That's not a case of beer for each one of us, but a case for the whole team," McManaman said.

Rodgers: Part of story true

A year ago, Playboy Magazine picked Nebraska its pre-season choice as the No 1 college football team in the nation

Cornhusker fans now await the magazine's September issue - not to see whether the Big Red will be No 1, but whether the team will be included anywhere in the Top Twenty

Anson Mount, who picks Playboy's pre season all-American squad and predicts the top teams, recently reminisced about his experiences in another national magazine

Ex-Nebraska all-American and Heisman Frophy winner Johnny Rodgers was one player Mount vividly recalls "While I was selecting our third team – for 1960 – Hefner (Playboy publisher Hugh) decided to splurge," Mount remembers 'He wanted to fly the players in to Chicago for a group picture The Playboy Club had just opened We could get some added publicity

The party was a whopper' Mount says adding that Syracuse halfback Ernie Davis monopolized Hefner's girlfriend In the early years, we had frequent problems with schools who were wary of sending their all American candidates to Chicago for the Playboy weekend," Mount adds "Many coaches apparently were afraid their innocent little boys would be systematically debauched by hordes of lascivious Playboy Bunnies

'It is inevitable," Mount continues, that when twenty-four handsome and famous young athletes attend a social gathering at which they meet a dozen or so very beautiful young ladies, some mutual interest should be expressed

I often have to explain to the Bunnies. as well as our secretaries, that we must discourage dating between the Playboy employees and the visiting players If one sports columnist looking for a sensational story should accuse us of fixing up the players with girls, all manner of hell would be raised by prudish alumni My explanation carried absolutely no weight with Johnny Rodgers the superstar from Nebraska, Mount claims Nor did it impress my own secretary Maxine Proctor They fell in love at first sight Two days after Johnny returned to

Lincoln he sent Maxine an airline ticket Since she wash t getting any work done anyway I let her take a vacation A few days later Mount adds

Maxine called from Lincoln and quit her 10b

Mount says Miss Proctor told him she and Rodgers were going to get married

Wednesday 7/27/77 ■ Page 27

as soon as possible The next night my phone rang at 3 a m. Mount adds. It was Johnny and Maxine They were having a lovers quarrel and wanted me to referee. It was dawn before I got them settled down The next night the same thing happened And the next And the next During one fight they destroyed most of the furniture in Willy Harper's apartment Within a week, Maxine was back in Chicago working at her desk and berating me for ever having introduced her to Rodgers

Rodgers now with the San Diego Chargers of the NFL after leaving the Canadian Football League admits the story is only true in part The two were engaged so to speak

Rodgers says but there were never marraige plans I dug her and she dug me but she knew we weren t going to get married. I treated her as a good friend not as a lover

Rodgers says he hasn't seen Miss Proctor for three or four years 'She was a good friend and I d like to see her again I still think we are friends he

Martin job security helped by Reggie homer to lead the Chicago White Sox to an 8.3 victory over

Reggie Jackson led off the bottom of the 10th inning with his 17th home run of the year to give the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over Baltimore and keep alive Manager Billy Martin's hopes of holding onto the reigns of the defending American League champions

Cliff Johnson pinch hitting for Bucky Dent, smacked a tworun homer over the rightfield wall in the bottom of the ninth to tie the game. Dent homered in the sixth and Jackson drove in a run with a single in the fourth for the other Yankees runs Three of the Orioles runs came on Ken Singleton's homer into the center-field bleachers in the third inning. It was the first homer into that part of Yankee Stadium since Mickey Mantle put one there in 1964 against the Chicago White Sox

The victory went to reliever Sparky Lyle his eighth against three losses. The triumph at least temporarily kept Martin at the helm of the Yankees who reportedly are considering firing him Yankees President Gabe Paul apparently is basing much of his decision-retaining or firing Martin-on the out come of this three-game series with Baltimore

In another AL contest Boston nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 43 on Don Aase's nine hitter. Aase a 22 year old called up from Pawtucket Tuesday morning struck out 11

Richie Zisk drove in five runs with a triple and a three-run

Detroit The win Chicago's sixth in a row gave the White Sox a five game lead over idle Kansas City in the AL West Kurt Bevacque drove in three runs with a home run and a single and Bert Blyleven hurled a four hitter to help Texas to a 14-0 rout of Toronto Chicago Cubs pitcher Rick Reuschel became the National League's first 14-game winner blanking the Cincinnati Reds 3

0 Jose Cardenal drove in two runs with a home run and a dou-John Candelaria 11 3 threw a four hitter to pace Pittsburgh to a 3.2 win over the Houston Astros. Catcher Ed Ott drove in the winning run with a homer in the seventh Keith Hernandez hit a two run inside-the-park homer that keyed a three run rally in the first inning as St. Louis beat the Atlanta Brayes 4.2 Bob Forsch, 13-4, worked five scoreless innings before leaving with a sore back Glenn Burke drove in the winning run with a double in the seventh and Steve Garvey hit his 23rd homer of the year to give Los Angeles a 5.1 victory over Philadelphia in the first game of a twi night doubleheader Rookie Gene Richards drove in the winning run in the pinth to give San Diego a 43 victory over Montreal in the first half of another twi night doubleheader

Washington - President Carter gave an unusually effusive welcome to Premier Giulio Andreotti Tuesday in a demonstration of U.S. backing for a minority government in Italy exchanges of expressing his thanks for Anthat must depend for its survival on Communist support in parliament

In the traditional greeting on the south lawn of the White House, Carter described his guest as "one of the most experienced and accomplished leaders in the whole world " He called Italy "one of the keystone nations in the European community" and "a valued partner of our own in the defense of the Atlantic region through NATO '

The President praised what he called Italy's "courageous action" to overcome the burden of having to import 75% of its energy supplies at inflated prices and said the sacrifices of the Italian people to restore their economic system "has been an inspiration to the rest of the world "

Administration officials had said in advance that Carter intended to use the visit to demonstrate Washington's confidence in Andreotti despite the fact that the premier recently negotiated a "programmatic accord" with the powerful Communist Party

The administration femains concerned about Communist influence and will encourage Andreotti to continue to exclude Communists from his cabinet But officials on both sides said the subject of the Communist role in Italy and in Western Eurpoe as a whole did not arise during the 90-minute discussion the two leaders held in the White House cabinet room after the welcoming ceremony

Wednesday, Carter and his guest will discuss energy problems, economic issues and bilateral questions Rex Granum, deputy White house press secretary, said it was probable that the Communist problem in Italy and the so-called "Eurocommunism" would be discussed at that session Carter made a point in Tuesday's dreotti's statement in France last week in support of the administration's emphasis on human rights in the conduct of American foreign policy. Andreotti made his remarks after a visit with Qresident Valery Giscard d Estaing of France, who recently said in an interview that Carter's emphasis on human rights could jeopardize detente between the West and the Soviet Union

Responding to the President's expression of gratitude, Andreotti said Tuesday that Italy's positions on human rights and East-West detente were very close to those enunciated by Carter in his speech last week to Southern legislators in Charleston, S.C.

In that address, Carter assured Moscow that his human rights emphasis was not intended to threaten Soviet interests or to "heat up the arms race or bring back the cold war '

Officials said that Carter told Andreotti that there had been no significant progress in negotiations with the Soviet Union on strategic arms limitations - the so-called SALT talks but there had been some encouraging developments in the discussions about a complete suspension of nuclear weapons tests

The two leaders also discussed the prospects for mutual and balanced force reductions between NATO and the Warsaw Pact nations, the problems involved in bringing chemical and biological weapons under effec-At a second White House meeting tive international control, and the outlook for a Geneva conference aimed at bringing peace between Israel and the Arab states

Carter was host at a state dinner in the White House Tuesday night for Andreotti.

The Lincoln Star

Tampa, Fla (AP) - Mary Torrisi believes pierced earrings can lead to romance or at least puppy love

She didn't want to have the ears of her 3-month old Great Dane cropped in the traditional short-pointed fashion. So she took Marmaduke to a jewelry store and had one of his ears pierced

Dobbie the Dalmation next door just fell in love with her when he saw the silver carring He just sat and stared sort of mesmerized Now he follows her all around says Miss Torrist 17 who received Marmaduke named after the comic strip character, as a birthday present from her

After okaving the idea with a veterinarian she checked with an ear-piercer at a local jewelry store - who said all right as long as Marmaduke agreed

I have this thing about earrings Miss Torrisi explained 'I ve always liked them. And one day when I can afford it Marmaduke and I will split a pair of good dia-

Hershey Food Corp announced Tuesday that it is reducing the weights of five of its standard candy bars an average of 12 8 per cent, the third weight-price change in the last 10 months

Furthermore, said Hershey Board Chairman Harold F Mohler, "There is a distinct possibility that we may have to increase our prices with the result that our standard bar will have to sell for 25 cents or more in most retail outlets

Last February, we emphasized that further price increases could not be avoided if cocoa bean prices did not recede 1976 significantly," Mohler said, "Unfortunately, cocoa bean prices have been rising rather than receding and are today about 25 per cent over the record levels of last February and about 225 per cent higher than in early 1976," he added

firms' energy forays irk some reserves diminish oil companies are tatives investing in alternate energy sources such as solar power coal and uranium But the diversification is leading to increasing talk in Congress and elsewhere o f stopping mic gamonopolies

Scn I dward M. Kennedy, D. Mass. introduced a hill Tuesday that would prevent major oil and gas companies from acquiring more coal or uranium properties. Within three years, those companies would have to dispose of the coal and uranium interests they now hold hearings on the proposal called horizontal divestiture will begin or not they now participate in the energy business, "should be permitted to contribution to the develop-Senate Judiciary Subcommittee

I think there's a general sense that we have detected not just among consumer groups but among utilities bus nessmen and people knowledgeable ibout the energy industry, that there's a problem here that the traditional economic analysis doesn't get a handle on said Hank Banta subcommittee a sistant counsel

There's a concern about the moral issues here—he also said

Put that concern doesn't always translate articlaction. Recent congressional attempts failed to force vertical divestiture which would probibit a corporation from carrying one more than one of the four traditional functions of the oil business -- exploration and production refining transportation and marketing

The major oil companies are fighting moves toward divestiture with all i anable weaponry - rewspaper and television advertising press releases speeches by top executives Tobbying in

New York (AP) - As oil and gas stockholders pressure their represen-

They say they are the logical entities to be involved in developing alternate energy sources business is by definition in the energy business Shell Oil said recently in a statement. 'The same kinds of expertise and management capabilities which are crucial to the oil business can be used effectively and efficiently, to develop alternative sources '

The American Petroleum Institute, a leading industry group, said Tuesday that Kennedy's bill "flies in the face of common sense " to make a contribution to the development of these alternate sources of

Critics argue that large-scale entry by oil firms into alternate energy fields stifles competition by smaller firms and increases what they call the monopolistic tendencies of oil com-

To say that you can do more with energy because you're already a monopoly is saying there s justification to be a megamonopoly, says consumer advocate Ralph Nader

A partial listing of oil company holdings in alternate energy fields may bidding was essentially limited to the serve as a primer on the subject of energy development

-Oil companies now supply about one fifth of LS coal production A crucial part of President Carter's energy proposal calls for large-scale development of coal reserves and conversion of many oil and gas-burning power plants to coal power

Continental Oil Co owns Consolida-Washington and requests that tion Coal Co, the second largest US

tons of coal, Shell has more than 22 billion tons

Also involved in coal are Standard Oil Co (Indiana), Standard Oil Co of A company which is in the oil California, Texaco and Gulf, among

> -Twenty of the almost 100 firms involved in the mining or exptoration for uranium are oil companies. Uranium is the primary fuel for nuclear reactors

"We believe Exxon now has the largest uranium exploration budget in the U.S., the firm said recently Other oil companies with holdings of uranium include Shell, Mobil, Standard of California and Gulf

-Some 86 commercially significant patents were issued from 1964 through 1975 for separating oil from rock Sixtynine of those 'oil-shale' patents went to oil companies

The seven largest U S oil companies all have oil shale holdings

Gulf Oil Corp uses oil shale as an illustration to bolster its argument that divestiture schemes are counterproductive In 1974, the Interior Department began its oil-shale leasing program by offering six leases in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming

Although the bidding for all six leases was open to anyone in the U.S. who wished to compete, the interest in oil companies said Edward Walker III president of Gulf Energy & Minerals Co a subsidiary of Gulf

Thus we have the bizarre situation in which this proposed legislation would prevent the oil companies, who are essentially the only ones who have shown a real interest, from developing this very large and important natural

-Experts believe that at least one coal producer Exxon owns 8.4 billion billion barrels of oil can be economically recovered from "tar sands" near Alberta, Canada So Syncrude Canada Ltd was formed to wring the oil from the sand Syncrude partners include affiliates of Exxon, Cities Service and Gulf Companies involved, or planning to become involved, in similar projects include Shell, Standard of Indiana, Sun, Mobil and Texaco

> -Since 1967, when the Union Oil Co joined a Northern California project to harness steam produced below the earth's surface, the project's production of power has increased tenfold Other firms looking at geothermal power include Gulf, Sheil, Mobil and Standard of California

-Oil companies also are well represented in solar energy projects One subsidiary of Exxon manufactures solar devices that supply electricity in remote locations, another subsidiary makes solar collectors for hot water and space heating devices

A subsidiary of Mobil is working on the conversion of sunlight to electricity as is a company controlled by Shell

When Exxon ran a series of ads earlier this year expressing doubt about the future of solar power, Rep Richard Ottinger, D-NY, and Sen Gary Hart, D-Colo, charged that the firm was misleading the public with "inaccurate statistics and pessimistic

They also said that perhaps Exxon s involvement in solar energy was designed to keep development of that power source under wraps

An Exxon official called the charges "preposterous and irresponsible, and other industry spokesmen said oil firms are battling for a foothold in solar energy and the competitive edge

Carter is fighting criticism

dent Carter, who readily acknowledges the role black voters played in electing him, is moving quickly in public and private to cut off criticism of his administration by black leaders.

Soon after Vernon Jordan, executive director of the National Urban League, issued a stinging critique Sunday of the Carter administration's first six months, the President, members of his Cabinet and White House aides were responding with aggressive defenses of the administration's work.

Jordan had told the Urban League convention that "amny black people feel that their hopes and their needs have been betrayed" by what he said was the administration's unresponsiveness to black problems.
The Urban League is a predominantly black organization interested in civil rights and city problems.

Carter was joined by two ranking black Cabinet-level officials, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and Patricia Roberts Harris, the secretary of housing and urban development, in defending the administration before the con-

On Tuesday, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall told the convention that the administration is dedicated to strict enforcement of the nation's civil rights laws rafter eight years of not-sobenign neglect."

Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell later addressed the convention, making him the fourth Cabinet-level offficial to take the podium.

Marshall said Carter has made civil rights a key area of his government reorganization project in order to improve coordination among agencies responsible for enforcing those laws.

When Carter addressed the convention Monday, he called Jordan "my good friend." and said the improvements he wanted to make in the lives of poor people would take more time

Then, privately, Carter took Jordan aside and made clear his feeling that public criticism of the administration was "damaging to the hopes and aspirations of those poor people.

Jordan said later that Carter may have bought some time, but not much. He also felt his criticism was "a fair and just analysis.

Carter also drew criticism from Newark, N.J., Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson who said his colleagues were too cautious about criticizing Carter. Gibson proceeded to say the President had misled his audience about his welfare and jobs programs.

The criticism caught Carter by surprise, an aide said. It was coming from blacks. whom Carter had said in November were "so instrumental in helping me become elected to the highest office in our land."

In his speech, Carter sought to ask a powerful interest group, with which he had enjoyed excellent relations, to see his viewpoint.

At the heart of the criticism hes politics: the promises of 1975 and the election of 1980.

Gibson showed a touch of skepticism about the administration's interest in helping poor blacks when he told the Urban League

Change of venue ruling put off

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island - With the first-degree murder trial of Bernard Schaeffer, 16, six days away, Hall County District Judge L. W. Kelly Jr. has reserved a ruling on a requested change of venue. The judge denied a postponement in the Aug. 1 trial, also requested by the defense. Attorney Tom Wagoner had asked for a continuance because of the ill health of the defendant's father, Bernard Schaeffer Sr.

Both motions were heard Tuesday morning in a brief court session at which Schaeffer's mother presented affidavits contending that her son couldn't receive a fair trial in Hall County.

"Excessive pretrial publicity and the attending public sentiment" were the reasons cited in the documents, signed by 30 persons.

Articles from the Grand Island

Independent and transcripts from newscasts of local radio station KRGI also were presented in evidence. None of the material was read in court, but was turned over to the judge for analysis.

Ralph Clark, general manager and publisher of the Independent, and KRGI news director Joe Kafka were subpoenaed to present the news accounts.

Kafka said his station had aired some 55 stories on the May 18 shooting death of Donald Beery Jr., Ace Hardware Store manager. Clark was not asked about the number of stories published and was not otherwise questioned. There was no suggestion that any of the accounts were prejudicial, the affidavits contending only that the coverage was "excessive."

Kelly could rule on the change of venue either before or after the selection of a jury, according to law. Unless a change in sites is granted sooner, the court will begin picking a jury at 9:30 a.m. Mon-

Kelly accepted the affidavits over the objection of County Atty. Sam Grimminger, who noted they were "limited to one small geographic area and friends" of the defendant's family.

Mrs. Schaeffer, who appeared only slightly nervous on the witness stand, said all but one of the 30 signers were acquaintances. She also acknowledged under cross examination that "about half" were from her church.

The defendant appeared calm and was allowed to converse with his parents before the proceedings. About a dozen other spectators, half of them reporters, were present.

A second youth charged in the incident, George Lanzendorf, has yet to be arraigned. There was no indication from the court when the arraignment will take

Omaha schools looking for blacks

Omaha (AP) - The current policy of seeking and hiring black applicants as counselors and administrators in the Omaha School District will not change, Asst. Supt. Ron Anderson has told a school board committee.

Blacks make up about 10% of the

The court-ordered integration of Omaha schools requires integrated faculties. Anderson said moving a black teacher out of one school to another which needed more blacks would mean

More women looking for jobs

A profile of the Nebraska working woman shows females will be found mostly in professional or clerical jobs and probably will be paid less than their male counterpart, the Nebraska Commission on the Status of Women said Tuesday.

The profile also indicated the number of women entering the Nebraska labor force was increasing "at a phenomenal and that non-working mothers would seek employment if better child care services were available, the commission said.

Clody Wright, commission chairman, said the study, "A Profile of Nebraska Women in Employment," includes graphs, statistics and information on Nebraska women's labor force participation, occupations, income levels, registered discrimination complaints, plague west

child care needs, job training and apprenticeship programs and educational levels.

She said the profile showed:

- Women dominate office, clerical and service jobs, with increases in the professional and technical level. Men hold most of the craft positions, such as building trades, electricians, skilled machinists and mechanics. In 1960, women held 69% of the clerical positions, and by 1970, the figure was 75%. Nebraska women held 16% of the professional and technical positions in 1970, and 4% were managers and administrators.

- Women in both private and public jobs were predominately found at lower salary levels, with 61% of the male employes earning more than $10,000 annually, compared to 15% of the female employes. Women teachers in Nebraska on the average with two or more years teaching experience earned about $1,1000 less each year than their male colleagues. Women school superintendents with an average of 23 years of more experience than their male counterparts averaged $2,000 less annually.

- More than 41% of Nebraska women are in the labor force and are increasingly entering the labor force. From 1960-1970, Nebraska women increased 33.3% in the labor force, compared to a 1% increase for men. As many as 49% of the women in the labor force were unemployed.

Grasshoppers

By Dominick Costello Farm Editor

Crawford — Things are really hopping at the Ron Dyer home in Belmont, located nine miles south of Craw-

The Dyers, and their neighbors in extreme northwestern Nebraska, are suffering from the grasshopper infestation that is plaguing parts of Dawes and Sioux Counties. "It is one big mess," said Mrs. Dyer. "They aren't just vegetarians. They ate big holes in the nylon sleeping bags of our guests from Maryland and are eating everything in sight. 'Our little girl is 3. She played with them at first but they cling to her and she can't get them off. She screams The invasion has also hit villages like Whitney, Deadhorse and Cottonwood Creek, where the damage is said to be the worst since the 1930s. Don Huls, Dawes County extension agent, said the grasshoppers are not a threat to the estimated 25,000 acres of pastureland in the area. But about 2,000 acres of irrigated alfalfa are endangered and the insects have stripped some oat fields and fruit trees.

The Dyers have had hoppers each of the last three years and they have been getting worse each year.

"They got my garden except for one picking of peas and a few radishes. They ate the flowers and everything in the yard. I think they are eating the posts in the yard now," Mrs. Dyer said.

Dave Keith, an extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska, confirms that the Dyer family isn't

"There are hot spots in several areas of the state this year. It is almost impossible to keep a green garden in a country area with pasture because they are attracted to anything green in the dry pasture areas." he said.

Mrs. Dyer said she hopes that some kind of spraying program can be developed next spring.

Jerry Bell of the federal Animal Plant Health Inspection Service in Lincoln said the federal government is considering spraying near Chadron.

Area ranchers would have to agree to submit at least 10,000 acres for spraying at a cost to them of 80c an acre before a federal program can be started, he said.

Until then, Bell said that chickens, pheasants and wild turkeys are grasshoppers' natural enemies.

"The grasshopper is excellent fish bait and you can boil them in peanut oil and eat them. I'm told they are quite high in protein," be suggested.

Legal clinics are unlikely in most areas of state

Omaha (AP) - The executive director of the Nebraska Bar Association doesn't think legal clinics like those springing up since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled it was legal for lawyers to advertise are feasible outside major population centers.

So Omaha and Lincoln would be about the only cities in Nebraska that could support such services, said Ted Dillow of the Nebraska Bar Association.

In Chicago, there are clinics offering lower fees than those charged by most private attorneys. In many cases, the clinics publicly list fees for consumers to see. The clinics are designed to bring legal services to middle-income people, who make too much money to qualify for legal aid but who many times cannot afford regular legal fees.

There currently are no such clinics in Nebraska. "The only way you can make a thing like climes economically feasible is to get a high volume of work." Dillow said. Nebraska is a largely rural state and clinics require large urban populations to supply them with clients, he said.

Indian land suit cost lowa most

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) - A land dispute between Nebraska Indians and white farmers in western Iowa was the most expensive lawsuit involving Iowa last year, State Auditor Lloyd Smith The cost of the suit to the state for the year ended June 30.

1976, totaled $12,079, including $8,753 in legal fees paid to Bennett Cullison Jr., of Harlan. He is a former assistant attorney general hired to represent the state in the complicated litigation.

Other costs included engineering services and aerial photography

The totals were included in Smith's annual audit of the Iowa Executive Council. Among the council's duties is to hire lawyers for the state on matters not handled by the attorney general's office. The state became involved in the land dispute because the Omaha (AP) - An architect and author of a book on solar energy says solar power is the only alternative to the nation's dwindling supply of fossil fuels

Bruce Anderson, 30, whose parents reside in Beatrice, said. 'It's not . . . whether . . solar energy can be used. It's a question of moving to it as fast as we can to ensure our future energy supply :

Anderson has written Solar Energy, Fundamentals in Building Design," an analysis of solar energy architecture for the professional designer. He also is the author of a paperhack written for the layman titled. The Solar Home Book.

Anderson, who lives in Harrisville, N.H., urges government subsidies to encourage people to switch to solar power. He said about half the states now offer tax incentives or rebates for installing solar equipment.

Omaha sirens will howl only to warn of tornado

Omaha (UPI) - Warning sirens in the Omaha area will sound only for tornado warnings, and not to advise citizens of possible flooding, officials said Tuesday.

William Noyes, Omaha-Douglas County civil defense director, said instead of using the sirens for flash flood warnings. Omaha police and fire units and Douglas County sheriff's officers would tour potential flood areas and use their public address systems to warn residents of any danger.

Omaha Public Safety Director Bill McDonnell issued a memo to fire, police and emergency 911 personnel explaining that the warning sirens would be activated only after the National Weather Service notified 911 of a tornado warning.

The new policy will enable all citizens to know that the warning sirens mean a tornado warning only. McDonnell said.

Sirens across the city were sounded Sunday because of a flash flood warning along Papio Creek, but Mayor Al Veys said people traditionally go to the basement when the warning sirens sound - the wrong place to be in a Noves said the sirens actually mean only that an alert has been issued and residents should tune in to radio or television broadcasts to find out the nature of the emergency.

Petition organizers cautiously confident

Leaders of the drive aimed at repealing the $20 million state school aid increase by petitions and a referendum said Tuesday they had more than 10,000 signatures.

Columbus Sen. Donald Dworak and S. H. "Zeke" Brauer Jr., lobbyist for an organization opposing increased school aid, were cautiously confident but less than optimistic.

"I never am optimistic about something like this," said Brauer, lobbyist for the ruraloriented Nebraska School Improvement Association and coordinator of the petition drive for a coalition of organizations known as "Citizens for Lower Taxes."

"Like Don, I feel more comfortable with a bird in the hand," he said, "I feel confident-not optimistic-but confident that we will get the required number.

The required number, according to a spokesman for the secretary of state's office, is almost 48,000, which Dworak said left significant ground yet to be covered before the Aug. 10 deadline

"We've got another thirtysome thousand to go in three weeks," he said. "That's more than 10,000 a week.

However, he said momentum may be building and he estimated that 4,000 people from among volunteers and members of some 10 organizatations were circulating petitions.

Brauer said there were more petitions in circulation now than at a comparable time in the 1974 drive aimed at a similar goal.

In 1974, Brauer and others opposed to a $100 million state school aid hike over two years succeeded in a petition drive requiring fewer signatures and the issue went on the ballot. Nebraskans repeated that law.

This year, LB33 calls for $20 million in increased state school aid and seeks $40 million more over the next two fiscal years.

Of the petitions with 10,000 signatures, almost 6,500 of the signatures were turned in by Tuesday at the office of Secretary of State Allen Beermann and were on their way to Nebraska counties for verification.

Beermann must determine that the legal number of signatures from registered voters has been met before the issue would go to a referendum in November 1978.

If the petition drive succeeds, the $20 million increase slated this fiscal year would be held up pending the referendum.

The actual deadline on the petitions by law is Aug. 29, but the coalition has pledged to end the drive Aug. 10 so school hoards trying to establish budgets by Aug. 15 will know whether or not to count on increased state aid.

Exon accuses Knutzen of raising 'phony issues'

By Lynn Zerschling Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon told Omaha Public Schools Superintendent Owen Knutzen he is clouding the school aid bill issue by raising Exon also told Knutzen he didn't appreciate his comments that Exon was not being "fully honest" on the school aid issue. The governor sent his remarks in a four-page letter to Knutzen regarding the petition drive to repeal the $20 million increase in aid to education bill passed by the Legislature over Elxon's veto.

Exon said the bill resulted in a one-half percent increase in the state sales tax and repeal of the bill, LB33, would result in a rollback of the state sales tax from 3.5% to 3%.

Although supporters of the bill claim LB33 is not solely responsible for the sales tax increase, Exon asserted the Legislature "spent the cupboard bare and then tacked on an additional $20 million in state aid increase."

"That was the spending straw that broke the taxpayers' backs," the governor wrote.

If educators had the courage of their convictions, Exon said, "you would acknowledge the obvious truth that massive doses of additional spending for any single purpose in amounts of $20 million per year of $60 million over three years will indeed increase state personal rancor and name-calling.

Exon said there is nothing wrong with advocating higher taxes for certain programs. However, the governor said the people should have a right to vote on LB33.

Additionally, Exon accused promoters of LB33 of raising a "phony issue" for blaming a livestock for raising the sales tax rate.

That bill, LB518, actually will save the state money, Exon said, because it will have the effect of reducing the upward pressure on

As a result. Exon said he was amazed "at the idle threat made by some educators that if a referendum effort was launched against LB33, they would retaliate and mount a referendum against LB518 on the assumption that if the sales and income tax receipts could not be used for more school aid it would not be used for personal property tax purposes

Exon told Knutzen, "You must resist the Don Quixote syndrome of chasing off after make believe windmills (no to be confused with mill levies) and false issues that are simp-

Stuart Wetzler, 33, a former Lincoln policeman, is considering running for sherriff if Asst. Police Chief Dale Adams also runs.

Wetzler said his entry in the race would be to block Adams. He says he was dismissed because he criticized the police department and opposed Adams as a candidate for appointment to the chief's office two years ago.

The police department said Wetzler was dismissed because he violated departmental rules, mishandled an accident investigation and failed to submit a report on the accident in question. A fourth reason for dismissal, the police said, were the results of a psychological evaluation of Wetzler.

City officials say the extra revenue will be used to pay off about $80 million worth of bonded indebtedness for the 100-megawatt coal-fired power plant the city plans to build. The council adopted an ordinance mandating a 15% rate increase effective Oct. 1. The second ordinance calls for 15% rate increases in each of the next three years. City Utilities Director Bob

Olson said the increases for 1978 through 1980 are based on conservative revenue projections and some may be less than 15%. A 15% increase would cause an increase of about 12% in an average utility bill, he said, because fuel adjustment charges included in each bill are not affected by rate increases

The University of Nebraska Foundation announced Tuesday a multi-million dollar gift from the James Stuart family of Lincoln in the form of approximately 50% ownership of the 12-story Stuart Building, 13th and P Sts.

James Stuart declined to put an exact value on the donation gift, saying it was 'a multi-million dollar gift."

He said the family hopes the theater portion of the building would be used for a performing arts center, but there is no stipulation.

"A gift is a gift," he said.
"We felt that when the (Civic Center) referendum was turned down, the community was really entitled to have that kind of a facility," Stuart said. "We want to make a contribution in that area and we felt it was the proper thing for us to do at this time.'

The donors are: Mr. and Mrs. James Stuart of Lincoln; their daughter, Catherine Stuart Schmoker of Minneapolis, Minn.; and their sons, James Stuart Jr., and Scott Stuart, both of Lincoln.

The property includes the historic Stuart Theatre with its auditorium and stage extending from the ground floor through the sixth floor, the retail space on the ground floor and the office space on floors two through five.

D.B. Varner, chairman of the foundation's board of directors, pointed out that the Stuart Theatre had once been the site of theatrical performances and concerts.

"With some modications, the Stuart Theatre can meet many of the needs of performing arts of this university and at the same time contribute importantly to the cultural life of the community," he said.

The Civic Center proposal, which will appear on the ballot in a special election this November, would combine the Old City Hall and old Federal Building into a performing arts center-municipal office complex.

E.J. Faulkner, vice chairman of the Civic Center Corp., the group promoting the bond issue, said the center is a "unique package." It should be viewed as "an investment in Lincoln's future and an investment in the quality of life in Lincoln," he said.

Irwin Dubinsky said Tuesday he had no comment on the announcement to give the theatre to the NU Foundation: "It's kind of a surprise to us," he said.

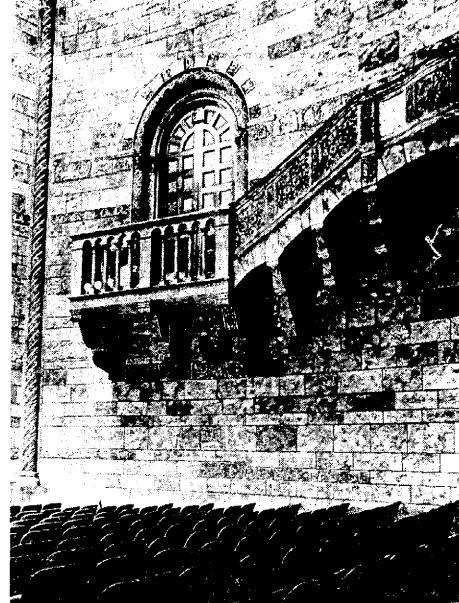

The Dubinsky Bros. had leased the theater in 1972 for 10 years.

Dubsinsky suggested in 1972 the theater could be restored to its original state for about $500,000. He said Monday he had no idea what the cost might be in 1977, except to note it would undoubtedly be higher.

County records show the Stuart Building and the land beneath it have an assessed, combined value of $1.6 million. The theater portion of the building has a value of $253,410, according to the records.

County Assessor Fritz Meyer said the taxes on the structure were $58,153 last year. If the theater portion were taxed separately, the

The Legislature's select committee to invetigate the Nebraska State Patrol elected officers Monday and then spent the rest of its first meeting in closed session.

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp was elected chairman of the eight-member group. Shortly after taking over, DeCamp made a motion to close the meeting to discuss "sensitive matters." The committee went along with his motion unanimously. Lincoln Sen. Steve Fowler was elected vice chairman.

DeCamp said the committee would be "breaking new ground in a number of directions." He said the probe would involve subpoenas of witnesses and closing hearings.

Phosphate

ban hikes

Indianapolis (UPI) - A survey in a state where phosphate detergents have been banned shows that water use has increased significantly, according to the Water Quality Association

In Indiana, the state surveyed 36% of householders rewash some laundry loans because the nonphosphate detergents they now use fail to clean satisfactorily Approximately 51 use extra tinsi cycles to remove nonphosphate detergent residues and lint from clothes. This increased water use, it is eslimated, amounts to 959 gallons per year per family Statewide, this could amount to over 127 billion gallons an-

Con Ed profits are bright spot

New York (4P) - Consolidated Edison Co of New York hit by a power failure July 13 that left New York City and many suburbs without lights, reported Tuesday a 141's gain in second-quarter profits

Con Ed. one of the nation s largest operating utilities, said it earned $49.8 million or 81 cents a share, up from $43.5 million, or 71 cents a share, in the second quarter of 1976

Revenues rose from $674.7 million a year ago to $682.2 million in this year's second quarter

A Con Ed spokesman said the rise in revenues and carnings in the period, which ended June 30 and thus did not include the blackout, was due to rate increases and power sales to other utilities
